MUSCULOSKELETAL KIDS
AUSTRALIA

I'm one of those kids.

A child in your class has been diagnosed with juvenile arthritis (JIA) or another musculoskeletal condition.

What can you do to help?

There are lots of ways a teacher can help a student living with JIA.

Try and develop an open communication with the child and their family and find out what support they need.

They'll be able to tell you what areas they need help with and who, if anyone, they want to share this information with.

Like most teens, kids living with JIA just want to fit in.

For more information about how you can support a student living with JIA, check out our school resources section at:
